WE published in Wednesday's paper a very important decision which has been given by the Court of Queen's Bench bearing upon the question of how far credit may continue to be given under a guarantee of traders wh are in circumstances which may possibly lead to insolvency. In the case in question, that of the CHARTERED BANK OF INDIA, Australia and China v. Just, the facts were of a very simple character. The defendant had guaranteed the solvency of a firm in Singapore to the Bank, who, on the 4th of October, discounted one of its bills, and the firm became insolvent on the 9th. The liability under the guarantee was disputed by the defendant, on the ground that the Bank, knowing the circumstances of the firm, should have communicated them to the defendant, so that he might withdraw his steamship Macgregor had been safely got off the in the first hearing of the case before Mr. having lost several feet of keel and three ribs. Justice Beackburn, given for the plaintiffs on the ground laid down by that Judgo that the answer was no defence unless the Bank beam, and 31 feet depth in hold, with comstop payment, and on a motion to set aside Hougtton & Co. completely useless as a security. There is, no doubt, an equitable consideration which at first sight seems to load to onposite view of the subject. It may b thought that there is a good test as to whether a Bank is justified in discounting count the same bill did the guarantee not exist; that is, in other words, it may be considered upon broad grounds of equity that which it would not incur for itself. But to being flat. this, the answer is clear, namely, that the Bank would not discount the bills of the particular firm at all, if it were not for the guarantee. That there was some risk of insolvency contemplated is evident from the fact that the guarantee was required in the first instance; and it was thus no new state of affairs that a possibility of this should become more apparent after affairs had gone on for a time. If the Bank was called upon to refuse to discount a bill on account of possibility of insolvency, they might be considerproceedings. No one would imagine that such a liability attached to them upon slight evidence of the probability of difficulty, ac that it would be clearly only a question of degree, and it would be quite impossible to define, on the basis of the defendant's argument when that degree would be attained. It would clearly deprive guarantees against the insolvency of a firm of every kind of value if when there was a probability of insolvency the holders of them were bound to offer to return them to those who had entered upon them. On the strength of a firm baving been guaranteed in this manner a Banker may have justifiably granted it considerably more credit than he would have thought of doing, if such guarantee did not exist. He may with perfect fairness have said: "I do not mind advancing them two, three, or four thousand pounds, because if see that it is necessary I can get their Bill for anything short of five thousand guaranteed by Messrs. So and So," and it would clearly be a gross injustice to him after fire, were fined $1 and 50 cents, respectively, one in pajagras. He was holding both hands to Peking regards it. We do not mean that the largely drawn upon by the nature of that trade thus secured depends mainly on the honesty HALL& HOLTz and KELLY be had placed himself in this position on the strength of the guarantee for the guarantor to turn round on him and say :-HALL& HOLTZandKELLY "You have no right to use my guarantee now because there is a chance of the firm becoming insolvent." The rejoinder would ... Mesers, Lane, Crawford & Cc. clearly be: "It was precisely at such a time that I contemplated using the guarantana precisely to guard against and a contingency that you granted to. It seems, in fact, somewhat strange that the defence resorted should have been set up and upheld by some lawyers of eminence at the English Bar. In the absence of a full Defendant, who said he assaulted the comreport of the case, it, is impossible to know what precise reasons influenced the defend ant. It would seem that the element last mentioned, namely, that general credit might be given to a firm which was guaranteed such as would not be granted to it if such a guarantee did not exist, was not taken into consideration; but it is clear that it has an important bearing upon the case. It is satisfactory, however, that the decision as rived at has been such as will rather increase than diminish the reliance that can be placed. upon mercantile guarantees. Unlike his Duchesses, who pale into Dowagers under the rmorseless touch of Time, Hopper never grows old, becoming rather younger as years advance, more glossy as to his feathers, more glorious as to his complexion, more radiant as to his teeth, more jaunty as to his strut, until at last some one becomes aware that he has vanished, and her Grace observes carelessly to a friend, as she plays with her gilt spoon, "So Hopper's dead, I thought I hadn't seen him for a month. Just one more cap of tea and another bit of muffin, my love, and then I really must go bome and dress." Poor Hopper! Then there is another class of sparrow, usually young, devoid of beard and guile, who, displeased with the boyelessly neutral character of his plumage, delights in bathing himself in the mud, twittering pompously the while, as he sends sputtering from his tail and wings a spray of dirty water. He considers that to live without being noticed is not to live at all, and prefers a circumambient shower of unclean liquid to complete absence of surrounding halo. PUNTI AND MANDARIN PRONUNCIATION. An Anglo-Chinese Dictionary, published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong.

MOR comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extense. Each and every word fully illustrated and explained, forming overcises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given, the accente being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast previously attained, and dispensing with those rast margins and recent spaces which have heretofore characterized Chinese publications. Fo illustrate the vast scope of the work, the following facts are submitted for consideration. Chalmers Vocabularly contains about 16,000 Chinese characters, and Medhurst's English and Chinese Dictionary about 100,000, whilst this work contains more than 50,000 English words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese characters. Again, despite all the grammar, and other elementary works as yet published, the student of this difficult language absolutely requires examples to display the various appli-cations and equivalents of different words which have one general meaning. Of these examples til 1671 Hongkong, Shanghai, Cologne (Germany.) many as any other Dictionary hitherto pub-

For practical purposes the arrangement of the work is so complete, that a reference to its pages enables a person who understands English to communicate effectively. with natives who under and nothing but Chinese. In this respect the work will be found indispensable to all Europeans residing in China, and to the natives themselves it explains subjects fully with which very few indeed of them are perfectly acquainted. To parties resident in England and interested in China it cannot but be invaluable occasionally, It comprises upwards of two thousand large

THE FARMER. My lord rides through his pulses gate, My lady sweeps along in state, The sage thinks long on many a thing And the maiden muses on marrying; The minstrel harpeth merrily, The sailor ploughs the feating sea, The hunteman kills the good red deer, And the soldier wars withouten fear;

But fall to each, whate'er befull, The farmer he must feed them all. Smith hummereth cherry red the award, Priest preacheth pure the Holy Word, Dame Alice worketh broidery well, Clerk Richard tales of love on tell; The tap-wife sells her foaming beer, Dan Fisher fisheth in the mere, ... 'And courtiers ruffle, strut and shine, While pages bring the Gascon wine;

But fall to each, whate'er befall, The farmentle must feed them all. Man builds his castle fair and high, Wherever river runneth by: Great oities rise in every land, Great churches shilly the builder's hand, Great arches, monuments andstowers, Far palaces and pleasing bowers; Great work is done, but here or there, And well man worketh everywhere; But work or rest-what 'er defall, The farmer be must feed them all.

WHAT DARK DE HOLE. Two darkeys in the West went out to he possums, and by accident found a large cav with a small entrance. Poeping in they dis covered three young, hear whelps in the interior .- "Look heah, Sam, while I go in dar," said one, "and gets de young bars, you just watch for de ole bar." Sam got asleep in the sun, and when opening his eyes he saw the old bear scouring her way into the cave and held on like blazes,—"Hullo dar. Sam, Jumbo, save yourself; if this tail come out you'll find what dark de hole."

WILLIAM IV. OPENING PARLIA.

Opening Parliament, when the sovereign appears in person, is a very brilliant spectacle to those who are privileged with an interior view, and an attractive one on a bright day to outsiders. But the sunshine cannot be commanded, nor is any human caremonial however gorgeous, exempt from the possib lity of a mishap. On one occasion, a mis adventure occurred, of which William IV was the victim, when the observed of all observers, who comported himself with great coolness and good sense under somewhat difficult and trying circumstances. It was the 4th of February, 1836. The day was unusually gloomy. The apartment fitted up to be temporarily used as the House of Lorde, after St. Stanhon's had been destroyed by fire, admitted only a scanty supply of light and the king's sight was imperfect. He was soon, therefore, brought to a pause while attempting to give vocal expression to the royal speech, yet manfully, and with the utmost good-humour, struggled to ge through the task. It was hard work, and of no use to bring the document as close as possible to his eyes. At last he came to standstill, completely puzzled to make out the next word, and said, appealing for aid to Lord Melbourne, who stood on his right hand. "Eh! what is it?" After floundering on a little longer, wax tapors were brought from the library, upon which, in the most perfeetly unembarrassed manner, he addressed the assembly as follows: "My Lords and Gentleman,-I have hitherto not been able from want of light, to read this speech in the way its importance deserves; but as lights are now brought me, I will read it again from the commencement, and in a way which. trust, will command your attention." With an unfaltering voice he read through the Quick as a wink he caught her by the tail.
